Recently, WITC was ranked the seventh best two-year college in the nation. Washington Monthly's community/technical college rankings are the first of their kind, and relied on Community College Survey of Student Engagement (CCSSE) and graduation rate statistics compiled by the U.S. Department of Education. The methodology identified community/technical colleges that excel in using teaching methods that researchers have linked to increased student achievement and identify colleges that are successful in helping students earn a degree.

In today's job market, you need to be the best qualified and best prepared. Wisconsin Indianhead Technical College helps you realize that success. By offering lifelong learning opportunities designed to develop needed skills and build upon the experiences you already have to meet the expectations of employers. As a result of experiencing the high quality of education offered at WITC, you will benefit from more rewarding career opportunities.

Wisconsin Indianhead Technical College is committed to the ideals of great citizenry and community. Community members who gain learning experience offered at WITC walk away knowing that they have acquired important skills that will not only improve their life, but also impact the quality of life in Northwest Wisconsin.
