

Student Clubs and Organizations

Student organizations help you develop leadership skills and gain competence and experience in your career area. You will also learn to apply democratic procedures and gain professional enrichment. Some co-curricular organizations are affiliated with state and national technical student groups such as Wisconsin Marketing Management Association (WMMA). Other organizations are associated with professional groups in a variety of occupational fields such as Nursing, Early Childhood Education, Mechanical Design, Barber/Cosmetology, and Student Ambassador.

Clubs & Organizations
AIA	Wisconsin American Institute of Architects	NSNA	National Student Nursing Association
	Barber/Cosmetology Club		Student Ambassadors
BPA	Business Professionals of America		Student Occupational Therapy Association
CSI	Collegiate Secretaries International	TTO	Telecommunications Technologies Organization
ECA	Early Childhood Association	VICA	Skills USA
IOPP	Institute of Packaging Professionals	VITA	Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Program
	Marketing Club		Welding Club
	Mechanical Design Club	WMMA	Wisconsin Marketing & Management Association
	Newsletter		Yearbook
NAHB	National Association of Home Builders

Organizations vary by campus. Student organizations are active throughout the year in a variety of activities such as conferences, workshops, business and industry tours, skill competition events, self-improvement projects, fund raising, guest speakers, and social functions. All students in good standing have the opportunity to participate in student organizations.

By participating in civic and charitable events and performing services, WITC's clubs become one of the most effective links that the student body has with the campus community. Contact your faculty member or student advisor for information concerning a club or organization related to your program. Any organization to be recognized by the college must have a faculty advisor, bylaws, and a list of officers on file in the Student Services office. No organization may use the name of WITC unless it is a recognized organization.

Student Publications - Student publications vary from campus to campus and may include the student newspaper, yearbook, newsletter, and video yearbook. These publications provide valuable experience in communication skills, business organization, human relations, and publication mechanics.