LEARNING CONCERNS

The student is encouraged to discuss any learning concerns with faculty as they arise. Student Services staff should also be consulted to promote more successful learning and retention of the content. This may be accomplished by meeting with a counselor or Student Success instructor. If the student knows or suspect that they have a learning disability, it is the responsibility of the student to identify and communicate this at the start of the semester to the instructor. Course standards cannot be lowered for the learning disabled. Assistance is available through Student Services on campus. The HIT instructor and Student Services staff will work together to help the student realize their highest potential.
